SENATOR OLIVER WAS DELIGHTED WITH VISIT

Extends Thanks Through Columns of "The Republican"

LIKES CENTRE COUNTY

Writes Expressing Appreciation of Greeting Accorded by Our Citizens on Occasion of Recent Trip—Much Pleased with State College.

That Senator Oliver was delighted with his first trip to Centre County and the cordial greeting extended by our people is testified to in a letter received on Tuesday by the editor of "The Republican." Senator Oliver's letter follows:

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 18, 1909.

Charles E. Dorworth, Esq.,
Editor "The Republican,"
Bellefonte, Penn'a.

MY DEAR MR. DORWORTH:

I have been so very busy since my visit to Centre County that I have not heretofore been able to express my appreciation of the courtesies extended me during my stay with your people.

Had that been all, a visit to your beautiful city and a view of the great work being done for the advancement of learning in so many ways at State College, would have more than repaid the journey, but the attentions shown me by your people throughout my stay were such that I cannot find words to fully express my pleasure at making so many new and kind friends.

As it is not possible to thank each one individually I wish to express through the columns of "The Republican" my sense of appreciation to all those who so generously contributed, by their universal kindness and courtesy, toward making my visit to Centre County a most delightful occasion.

Very sincerely yours,
GEORGE T. OLIVER.

Senator Oliver's first trip to Centre County was a [illegible] in many respects. He was accorded a reception at the Bush House which was attended by many of our most substantial citizens. On last Thursday morning accompanied by County Chairman Harry Keller J. Thomas Mitchell and the editor of "The Republican", Senator Oliver visited State College, where he delivered a brief address to the students assembled in the auditorium. President Sparks and members of the faculty occupied seats on the stage. President Sparks introduced Senator Oliver in a happy little speech and at the conclusion of the latter's address he was warmly applauded and give a lusty cheer by the students.

Proceeding from State College to Centre Hall Senator Oliver was greeted by the large crowd at the grangers' picnic. In the afternoon he delivered an address in the auditorium, dwelling on the importance of making the life of the farmer attractive and of more value in a financial way in order that the rapidly increasing drift of young men from the farm to the cities may be checked. He also declared himself in favor of rigidly enforcing laws to require that oleomargarine be stamped as such in order that innocent persons may not be defrauded.

SITE FOR MASONIC HOME

Lancaster County Secures Institution Costing $2,000,000.

Much disappointment was felt in Centre county over the annonncement last week by Grand Master George B. Orlady. of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, that Elizabethtown, Lancaster county, had been chosen as the site for the proposed State Home for aged and indigent Masons, their wives and children. It had been fondly hoped by the people of Centre county that a site in the vicinity of State College would be chosen, but the committee which visited here some time ago decided in favor of Elizabethtown and that, unfortunately, ends the matter.

According to the plans of the Grand Lodge and the committee, the institution will ultimately represent the investment of $2,000,000. The site was chosen with a view of locating upon it the Masonic institution for orphan boys provided in the will of the late Thomas R. Patton, who left an estate of $1,046,735 for the purpose. It is proposed to have groups of buildings on the property to make provisions for unmarried men, old pairs, children and every class of helpless, indigent or infirm that come under the protection of the order.

The site consists of 850 acres of fine land, south of the Pennsylvania railroad. It contains several pieces of woodland and large springs of pure water. The price is said to be about $100,000.

WEDDING AT JOHNSTOWN

Former Bellefonte Girl Becomes Wife of Joel A. Good.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Jefferson Shope, of 184 Chandler Avenue, Johnstown, but formerly of Bellefonte, was the scene of a very pretty wedding last Thursday evening when their only daughter, Ida Marie, became the wife of Joel A. Good, of that city. Promptly at 8 o'clock, Rev. Mr. Sharp, pastor of the Barron Avenue United Brethren church, performed the ceremony in the presence of about forty relatives and friends. Miss Iva M. Askey, of Pine Glenn, Centre County, a friend of the bride, and Isaac Good, a brother of the groom, were the attendants. The wedding march was played by Miss Pearl Davis, of D Street, and the ring ceremony was used, after which the happy young couple received the hearty congratulations and best wishes of all present. At 8.30 o'clock the guests retired to the dining room, where a splendid supper was served. The home was beautifully decorated for the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Good were the recipients of many beautiful and costly presents, including fine linen, china and cut glass. The bride is a very popular and attractive young lady among the younger social set of Johnstown. Mr. Good is very popular and has made many friends while in Johnstown. He is employed at the Swope Milling Company and is qualified in every way to become the head of a home. They will go to housekeeping in Johnstown. "The Republican" extends hearty congtatulations and best wishes for a long and happy life.

RANDOLPH—BURWELL.

A wedding which was a surprise to their many friends in and about Pine Grove was that on Tuesday when Allen Burwell and Miss Beulah Randolph quietly slipped away and driving to Spruce Creek were married by Rev. R. M. Campbell.

After the ceremony the happy young couple returned to the Randolph farm where a wedding breakfast was served and they were showerd with congratulations. The groom is a [illegible] young man, a [illegible] head of a home. "The Republican" extends its hand, wishing Mr. and Mrs. Burwell much joy and happiness.

NEW COUNTRY CLUB

Planning to Rebuild on Site of Old Structure at Hecla.

At a meeting of members of the Country Club, held at the Bush House, on Tuesday plans were considered for rebuilding at Hecla on the site of the structure recently destroyed by fire. Several other sites have been examined in the last few weeks, including the old Wagner property at Milesburg. At Tuesday's meeting it developed, however, that the sentiment of a majority of the members favored rebuilding at Hecla.

The question of financing the new club was considered. It is believed that this may be handled with little or no difficulty. The only point on which there was any extended discussion was the form of deed by which Lawrence McMullen proposes transferring the land to the club. It is believed that this will be adjusted satisfactorily and that in a comparatively short time work on the new club house will be under way.

Bellefonte Boy Honored.

John L. Noll, son of Emanuel Noll, of this place and still regarded as a Bellefonte boy, was last week elected by the Altoona School Board as professor of the high school machine shop, succeeding Professor Louis Meuenschwander, resigned. John is attached to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's shops at Altoona and the company grants him a furlough during the school term. Speaking of his selection in the high school the Altoona "Tribune" said: "Mr. Noll learned his trade with Jenkins & Lingle, at Bellefonte. He then went to Peoria, Ill., where he studied in the Bradley polytechnic institute. He is now employed in the local railroad shops. Mr. Noll has specialized in geometry and higher mathematics, something he cannot know too much about for the position." Congratulations to a Bellefonte boy and his success.

Boy Falls into Spring.

Eight-year-old Clayton Kilpatrick, son of Dr. Kilpatrick, the dentist, celebrated his return home last week by falling into the big spring on Saturday. With several other boys of about the same age he was playing nearby the spring and somehow he upset into the icy cold water. Clayton hustled out as quickly as possible and scooted for home where a change of clothing fixed him up all right. He escaped without so much as a cold, which is pretty good indication that he is made of the stuff of which the real American boy is manufactured.

LITTLE PAUL MILLER MAY LEARN TO TALK

Cries Himself to Sleep First Night at Mt. Airy Institute.

HAPPY WITH HIS BLOCKS

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert F. Miller Assured Their Pretty 5-year-old Son Will Some Day Return Home Able to Talk Like Other Boys.

What could be sweeter to the ear than the voice of a child?

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert F. Miller, of Bellefonte, have never known the joy of hearing the voice of their little son, Paul Irvin. Five years old in February, next, Paul has never known the happiness of being able to speak or to hear.

Scientific training and loving hearts have joined forces that Paul may be taught to talk and in a few years, perhaps, he will share the treasures of life as do other children. For Paul last week entered the Mt. Airy Institute, near Philadelphia, and the encouragement held out by the managers of the institution warrant the confident belief of his parents that there are brighter and better and happier days ahead.

Hundred of miles will separate the child and his parents while the teachers at Mt. Airy bend their efforts to awaken the lifeless voice. As if fully realizing that it was for the best Paul willingly remained at the institution and is now content and happy in his new life. Knowing that it is for the best and that he is where he will receive splendid care and attention Mr. and Mrs. Miller are already looking ahead to the time when their boy will again be home.

The case of Paul Miller is one which commands the loving sympathy of all parents. Whether he was born a mute or whether his misfortune is due to a fall is a point which no one can [illegible] Physicians believe that [illegible] group of pretty houses east of the jail, are disposed to think that perhaps the little fellow's trouble was caused by a fall when he was a baby. His pretty face with its winning smile will be missed by all who knew him and especially by the other children of that neighborhood with whom he was a favorite. They, too, are looking forward to Paul's home-coming.

Mr. Miller and Paul made the journey to Philadelphia one day last week and went to Mt. Airy that same afternoon. The managers knew in advance of the coming of the child and were ready to receive him. A little timid for an instant Paul soon lost all his fears when the motherly superintendent picked him up in her arms and kissed him. There are many children at Mt. Airy. Forty have entered this year. Of the entire group Paul Miller is the youngest.

Paul's first night away from home was the hardest for him. He cried himself to sleep but was contentedly playing with his blocks when his father visited the institution the following morning. Mr. Miller remained but a short time and then departed, returning to Bellefonte that night.

"They told me that they could teach Paul to talk," said Mr. Miller on his return, "and we know he is where everything possible will be done for him. It will be a happy day with us when he comes home."

The instruction of mute children at Mt. Airy is exceedingly interesting. The method that will be employed in the case of Paul Miller is that of gradually developing the use of the lips trying to pronounce words. By this method many children have been taught to talk, the voice becoming stronger and more distinct with each year as they grow older.

Mt. Airy is a beautiful place. The buildings are modern, are designed to be as comfortable as possible and the instructors are selected with particular care in order that the children may receive every attention. Surrounding the buildings are beautiful grounds which remind one of the campus at State College.

Option On Furnace Cinder.

Thomas A. Shoemaker has secured an option on the mammoth piles of cinder at the Bellefonte furnace. He proposes shipping the cinder to Northumberland, to be used on concrete work in his big contract for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at that place. It is estimated that there are upward of 1,000,000 tons of cinder at the Bellefonte furnace and probably as much at the Nittany furnace. Other parties have an option on the cinder at the latter furnace.

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

Movement Launched to Advance Work of Bellefonte Y. M. C. A.

The women of Bellefonte have organized an auxiliary to the local Y. M. C. A., the movement being formally launched at a meeting held on Tuesday evening. For several weeks the project has been under consideration and at Tuesday night's meeting it took definite shape in the election of officers. It is proposed to enlist the active support of at least two hundred women in Bellefonte, with a membership fee of fifty cents a year, the proceeds to be devoted to Y. M. C. A. work.

One suggestion advanced is that a part of the proceeds be used in paying the membership fee for poor boys who otherwise may not share in the benefits and privileges of the Y. M. C. A.

The officers of the Women's Auxiliary are Mrs. William P. Wilson und Mrs. Thomas R. Hayes, presidents, and Mrs. John N. Lane, Mrs. Harry Keller, Mrs. J. E. Ward Miss Waite, and Miss Barry, vice presidents. Mrs. W. R. Jenkins was chosen treasurer, and Mrs. Clement Dale, secretary.

It was deemed advisable that two presidents be elected in order that one might act in the absence from town of the other. A number of committees were named to take charge of different lines of work. Mrs. Archibald Allison is chairman of the Reception Committee; Mrs. J. A. Beaver, chairman of the House Committee; Mrs. John S. Walker, chairman of the Entertainment Committee; Mrs. Frank Warfield, chairman of the Floral Committee; Mrs. R. G. H. Hayes, chairman of the Music Committee; Mrs. Cheney Hicklen, chairman of the Refreshment Committee.

A general reception for the people of Bellefonte will be held at the Y. M. C. A, rooms tonight at 7.30 o'clock. An invitation to the public is extended.

Loganton School Burned.

Fire of mysterious origin completely destroyed the school building at Loganton, early Sunday morning. Comparatively [illegible] known as to what caused [illegible] the comment heard in that [illegible] the second floor of [illegible] building. An alarm was quickly sounded and soon the entire town was awake and a bucket brigade formed. The building was a wood structure and the flames made rapid headway. Several men who were first on the scene succeeded in saving some of the desks and books. The wood house adjoining also was burned to the ground, although a large quantity of cord wood was saved. Nearby fences were saved by attaching garden hose to house spigots. The school had opened for the winter on September 13. The building and furniture were insured for $1500, and it is not improbable that a larger and more modern school house will be built.

No Assessment Required.

In last week's issue of "The Republican" we mentioned that at the regular September meeting of the Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company an assessment had been levied to cover several fire losses, including the insurance on the Country Club at Hecla. This was an error, there being sufficient funds in the treasury to meet the several recent losses without requiring an assessment. This condition of affairs speaks well for the company, the officers, directors and stockholders of which include quite a number of Centre County's most substantial business men.

Liberty Township Teachers.

The schools of Liberty township opened for the winter term last week. In Blanchard the teachers are as follows: Principal and teacher of the High school, Prof. J Milford Pletcher; Grammar, Mrs. Rebeca F. Glossner; Intermediate, Miss Mary Johnson; Primary, Miss Verna Glossner. In the township schools outlying the following are the teachers: Mountain, Miss Olive Gardner; Clark, Miss Lulu Gardner; Hunter Run, Samuel Smith; Bowes, Miss Laura Bechdel; Big-Run, Scott Holter; Monument, Charles Batscheler.

Bruce Underwood Injured.

The many friends of Bruce Underwood, a former Bellefonte boy, were shocked to learn that he was so seriously injured in Minnesota several days ago that it was necessary to amputate both feet. For a time it was feared that he would not survive. He is a nephew of Isaac Underwood, of Bellefonte, and worked for a time in Pittsburg for the Carnegie Steel Company. Later he was transferred to the Minnesota ore fields, north of Duluth. The only information received here thus far is that he was run down by a train.

17-YEAR-OLD STUDENT ELOPES WITH HEIRESS

Fred Mugele Disappears From Bellefonte Academy.

BRIDE LEAVES CONVENT

Miss Stella Talbot, of Niagara Falls, Also 17 Years Old, Quits School to be Married Young Couple Telegraph Parents Asking Forgiveness.

School circles in Bellefonte were given a stir on Monday with the discovery that 17-year-old Frederick Mugele, of Pittsburg, a student at the Bellefonte Academy, had eloped with Miss Stella M. Talbot, of Niagara Falls, and that the two had been secretly married. Miss Talbot is also 17 years of age, and is said to be heiress to about $1,000,000. Mugele s a son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Mugele, 214 South Dallas, Street, Pittsburg, who also are wealthy

The first that the parents of the young man knew that he had been married was when a telegram was received announcing the fact and asking forgiveness. Mr. Mugele thought the boy was busily engaged with his studies at the Academy. When he recovered from his amazement after reading the telegram he wired the young couple to report at Pittsburg and be spanked.

Young Mugele and his bride arrived in Pittsburg where they were promptly forgiven. The youthful groom was sternly informed that he would have to go to work to support his bride. Among the students at the Academy the elopement is the one topic of discussion. On Tuesday Professor J. R. Hughes, headmaster at the Academy, received a letter from young Mugele in which he said:

"I am sorry I had to leave the way I did but I couldn't help it. I loved the old Academy, but I loved the girl more."

Mugele was one of the most popular boys at the Academy. Last year he was manager of the foot ball eleven and [illegible] he secretly left to marry the girl he loved. He told Professor Hughes that he was going away but did not explain the exact purpose of his sudden trip to Toronto, Ontario, where Miss Talbot was a student in a convent. The wedding occurred on Wednesday of last week. Mugele and Miss Talbot went to Niagara Falls where the ceremony was performed by Rev. Father J. J. Roach, of the Sacred Heart church, of Niagara Falls. Taking a train for Buffalo, Mugele decided it was time to notify his parents and he hastily wrote a brief telegram which made things lively in the Mugele home in Pittsburg.

Mrs. Talbot, the mother of the bride, resides at 955 Niagara avenue, Niagara Falls. Thus far she has refused to reply to tearful messages asking forgiveness. The parents of the groom say there was no objection to the match other than the tender ages of the contracting parties.

Announcement.

Contrary to unreliable reports, I have not discontinued, nor shall I discontinue, business in Bellefonte. I shall remove from my present location to High steeet (the place not fully determined) on or before April 1. Respectfully,

M. C. GEPHART.

It is with no little pleasure that "The Republican" publishes the emphatic denial by Mr. Gephart of the groundless rumors that he comtemplated discontinuing business in Bellefonte. We need business men of the type of Mr. Gephart in Bellefonte. Mr. Gephart opened a music store in Altoona, at 1427 Eleventh Avenue, one year ago, which has far exceeded his expectations and which he will continue along with his Bellefonte business. He is well known and firmly established in his line throughout Centre County. He is strictly reliable and fair in all his business relations and well deserves the public confidence and patronage. When in need of anything in the musical line give Mr. Gephart a call. By so doing you will encourage the continuance of a music store and business establishment in Bellefonte and Centre county, which necessarily should exist in our community.

A Novelization of the Play of the Same Name

By BOOTH TARKINGTON and HARRY LEON WILSON

Pike gazed after him with an admirable chuckle. As he turned about he saw Ethel standing at the head of the steps, and there was a sad look upon her face.

"I hear that Lord Hawcastle has left," she said quietly.

"Yes. I saw him go last night," he answered, looking up at her.

"He left very quickly," she said absently.

"He did seem to be forgetting the scenery," the American replied. "Did you see Ivanoff?"

"Yes. I am almost sorry. He made so much of—what I could do."

"There are some good people over here, ain't there?" he ventured, and she looked at him quickly.

"When you are at home again I hope you will remember them," she said.

"I will," he replied.

"And I hope you will forget everything I ever said," she went on.

"Somehow it doesn't seem likely as if I ever would," he returned.

"Oh, yes, you will," she said. "All those unkind things I said to you"—

"Oh, I'll forget those easy," he interrupted quickly, and she went on, almost tearfully:

"And the other things, too, when you're once more among your kind, good home folks—and probably there's one—you'll be so glad to get back to you'll hardly know you've been away—an unworldly girl, one that doesn't need to be cured of—oh, all sorts of follies—a kind girl, one who's been sweet to you. I can see her; she wears white muslin and waits by the gate for you at twilight. Isn't she like that?"

He shook his head.

"No, not like that."

"But there is some one there?" she asked.

He smiled sadly.

"Well, she's only been there in a way. I've had her picture on my desk for a good while. Sometimes when I go home in the evening she kind of [illegible] be there. I bought a homey [illegible] an old piano that used to be my mother's and singing to me"—

"Singing 'Sweet Genevieve?'" she asked quietly.

"Yes, that's my favorite. But, then, I come to and I find it ain't so. No voice comes to me, and I find there ain't nobody but me"—

"You'll find her some day," she put in quickly. "I shall think of you often with her listening to her voice in the twilight. And I shall be far away, keeping the promise that I have made and living out—my destiny."

"What destiny?" he asked gravely.

"I am bound to Almeric by his misfortune. He has to bear a name that is disgraced, and it is my duty to help him bear it—to help him make it honorable again, to inspire him in the struggle that lies before him to rise above it by his own efforts, in the product of his work"—

"Work?" asked Pike in astonishment.

"Yes," she went on. "No matter how humbly he begins and no matter what it costs me, I must be with him, helping him. Isn't that true?"

"That's what any good, brave woman would do," he said.

"It must be done. I haven't seen Almeric since last night. I must see him now. I've shirked facing him today. He has always been so light and gay that I dread seeing him bending under this blow. It is my duty to help him bear it."

"You'll find her some day."

"Yes; it's your duty all right."

"Then you think I am right. You agree"—

"Yes; I agree," he answered gravely. "I give my consent to your marriage."

"You do!" cried Ethel. And there was a distinct horror in her tone. It was as if the idea shocked her.

"I'll place it in your hands," he answered and then was rudely twirled about by Horace, who had approached.

"I protest against this!" cried the young man. "She does not know what she's doing! I for one won't have it!"

"Too late!" cried Ethel, with a choking sob. "He's consented!"

And with a bowed head she ran from them into the hotel.

CHAPTER XIX.

IN SUSPENSE.

HORACE turned on Pike. His voice trembled with suppressed rage.

"A fine guardian, you are!" he said witheringly. "You came here to protect her from something you thought was rotten. Now we all know it's rotten you hand her over!"

The lad paused, and then he laughed bitterly.

"By Jove," he exclaimed of a sudden, "I shouldn't be surprised if you consent to the settlement too!"

The lawyer looked at him gravely.

"My son, I shouldn't be surprised if I did."

"By the Lord, but you play a queer game, Mr. Pike."

"Oh, I'm just crossing the Rubicon. Your father used to say: 'If you're going to cross the Rubicon, cross it. Don't wade out to the middle and stand there. You only get h—ll from both banks!'"

WITH A CRY OF RAGE AND DESPAIR ETHEL TURNED ON HIM.

"I beg your pardon," said a voice behind them, and they turned to find Lady Creech. She went on, addressing Horace:

"Mr. Granger-Simpson, have you seen my nephew?"

"No. I've rather avoided that, if you don't mind my saying so," Horace replied.

"I'm sorry, Lady Creech," he went on, "but I've had a most awful shaking up, and I'm thinking of going back home with Mr. Pike. I think he's about right in his ideas. You know we abused him, not only for himself, but for his vulgar friend, yet his vulgar friend turned out to be a grand duke, and look at what our friends turned out to be!"

He stepped quickly to the entrance and disappeared into the hotel. Almeric's voice was heard as Lady Creech turned to go, and Pike smiled.

"Here he comes now, bending under the blow," he said.

Almeric appeared with a white bull pup, which he handed over to Mariano with the remark:

"Wash him a bit, old chap; tepid water, you know, and a drop of milk afterward — nothing but milk, you know. Be deuced careful, I say!"

As Mariano disappeared with the dog at arm's length Lady Creech said solemnly:

"Almeric, really there are more important things, you know."

"Rot!" replied the young man. "I almost missed him. But I think I'm to be congratulated, you know. Eh?"

"I think you are, my son," said Pike quietly. "I have given my consent."

"Rippin'!" declared Almeric. And Lady Creech started forward.

"And the settlement?" she asked. Pike nodded.

"The settlement also—everything!"

Ethel came from the side of the terrace, followed by Horace, who seemed to be arguing with her.

"Of course I never worried, you know," said Almeric. "But I fancy it will be a weight off the poor governor's mind. I'll wire him at Naples, for he'll be glad to know about that bally convict chap—the arrangement you made with him, you know."

"Almeric, I think it's noble to be brave in trouble, but"— Ethel began, and Pike smiled behind his hand. Almeric looked at her in astonishment.

"I say, you know, you've really got me!"

"I mean that I admire you for your pluck, for your seeming unconcern under disgrace, but"—

"Disgraced! Why, who's disgraced? Not even the governor, as I see it! You got that chap called off, didn't you?"

"Whom do you mean?" she asked wonderment in her voice.

"Why, that convict chap. Didn't you send him away? You bought him off so he wouldn't talk, didn't you—gave him money not to bother us?"

She whirled on him like a storm.

"Why, heaven pity you! Do you think that?" she cried.

Almeric was taken aback.

"Oh—what! He wouldn't agree? Oh, I say, that will be a pill for the governor—he'll be worried, you know!"

Ethel went close to him.

"Don't you see that you've got to worry a little about yourself; that you've got to begin to do something worthy that will obliterate this shame? To work—to work!"

"What possible need will there be for that? Why, there's the settlement"—

"Settlement!" cried Ethel, aghast. "You talk of settlement now?"

"Don't you see? The only objection was the settlement, and Mr. Pike's given his consent to that."

"He's consented to that?" she asked.

"With his own lips. Didn't you?" Almeric asked Pike.

"I did," said the lawyer quietly.

She recoiled from the group.

"Yesterday, when I wanted something I thought of value, he refused to let me buy it. Today, when I know that name is less than nothing, he bids me give my fortune for it. What manner of man is this?"

Almeric slapped his leg.

"I don't see that the situation is changed. I don't stick out for the precise amount the governor said. If I ought to be less because of last night—why, we won't haggle over a few thousands."

With a cry of rage and despair Ethel turned on him.

"This is the final word of my humiliation! I felt that you were in shame, and because of that I was ready to keep my word—to stand by you and help you make yourself into a man. Now you ask me to pay you for the privilege. I am released! I am free! I am not that man's property to give away!"

Lady Creech turned to Almeric.

"This is beyond everything! Give me your arm, Almeric. We will go."

"Most extraordinary girl. Beyond everything, isn't she?"

Together they went into the hotel, and Pike watched them with somber eyes. Horace quietly slipped off through the arbor. Ethel turned to Pike violently.

"What have you to say to me?" she demanded. "What explanations have you to make?"

"None," he answered.

"Because you don't care what I think of you. You were willing to give me up to these people, to let me romanticize about honor and duty, about my efforts to make that creature a man, and you knew all the time it was only the money they were after!"

"I shouldn't wonder," he replied.

"Didn't you know that would horrify me? Didn't you see that your consenting, leaving me free to give it to them, would release me?"

"I shouldn't be surprised."

"You mean you've been saving me again from myself? You let me make a fool of myself and then show it to me, and after that you'll deny it! It's like you. Do you think any girl could love a man like that? Go back to your dream girl, your lady of the picture!"

"She won't be there," said Daniel disconsolately.

"She might be," Ethel answered in a different tone.

"There ain't any chance of that. The house will be empty still," he said.

"You might be wrong—for once," she replied, and there were tears in her voice—"just for once!"

With a quick look at him she ran from the terrace and into the hotel. A moment later, while he was staring moodily at the pavement, a piano began to tinkle, and a moment later Ethel's voice came to him. His face lit up, and he stepped closer to the window. Then his arms went out.

She was playing "Sweet Genevieve!"

THE END.

Capital Punishment In Germany.

Although little is heard outside Prussia of capital punishment within the kingdom, the law is by no means a dead letter. In seven years there have been ninety-eight executions, ten of the condemned being women. Silesia heads the list, with twenty-one executions, followed by Brandenburg, Posen and Rhineland.

No executions take place in Berlin, the condemned being taken to the prison at Ploetzensee, in Brandenburg, where they have a standing guillotine.—London Globe.

He Got the Chair.

[illegible] very hot afternoon a number [illegible] town [illegible] Several traveling men came out of the hotel and, finding all of the chairs occupied, looked and spoke things that wouldn't go well in polite society.

"Let's dump a few of them out," suggested one.

"Hold on a minute," replied another. "Watch me get a chair." With that he walked over to one of the loungers and in the most courteous way said, "Will you please tell me whether that is a drug store across the street?"

"No," replied the lounger; "that's a bank."

"Oh, is it? Well, say, what is that nice big building just down the street there, two corners away?"

"That's the postoffice," was the reply.

"You live in this charming city, then?" asked the drummer.

"I do," said the lounger.

"Well, then," replied the traveling man, "I'm a guest at this hotel and paying for accommodations. Suppose you get up and give me that chair."

He got the chair.—Kansas City Journal.

Varieties of Humor.

The Temple of Art, devoted to that peculiar form of entertainment yclept "polite vaudeville," was crowded to suffocation as Messrs. Biff and Bang, the refined sketch team and sidewalk conversationalists, stepped jauntily to the footlights. In response to the deafening applause Messrs. Biff and Bang bowed condescendingly, as though it hurt them.

Without further preliminary Mr. Biff hit his partner on the rear of his ample trousers with a stuffed club, remarking, "It's a wise man that knows his own mind."

And Mr. Bang, not to be outdone in this little exchange of pleasantries, promptly buried an ax in the skull of Mr. Biff, remarking the while, "It's a wise man that minds his own nose."

Whereupon the intelligent audience screamed with delight and voted Biff and Bang the best ever. "And yet they were a frost in the London halls," commented a man in the front row. "The English have no appreciation of real humor." — Philadelphia Ledger.

To Save a Drowning Person.

To save a drowning person swim up cautiously. DO NOT LET HIM SEIZE YOU. Grasp him by the hair. Swim on your back, resting his head on your chest, and tow him along. After the rescue clear the patient's air passages of water. To do this lay patient face downward over a barrel or log or else clasp your hands under his stomach and raise him. Follow with artificial respiration.

UNCLE SAM'S NEW MELON.

Delicacy From Roumania Which Will Be Grown Here.

The department of agriculture is always alert for something new, and the diplomatic and consular officers of the United States have special orders to be on the lookout for new fruits and vegetables.

So well have these orders been carried out that many new and strange fruits and vegetables have found their way to the tables of the American housekeeper.

One of the latest and best things in this line has been the introduction into the United States of the Roumanian watermelon. This was the result of a deal consummated by the late minister to Roumania, Horace G. Knowles.

When Mr. Knowles found this melon growing among the foothills of Carpathia he realized that it would be just the thing to serve individually in America, and instead of hotels serving huge slices of watermelon it would be possible to serve a whole uncut watermelon of the Roumanian variety, equal in every way to the best Georgia melon.

The new melon has a thin skin, and the meat, which is less fibrous than the American melon, is both yellow and red in color. The flavor is delicate and delicious, but the chief characteristic of the fruit is its size, which is about that of a good sized grapefruit or shaddock.

After a thorough test by the argicultural department, which found that the Roumanian melon could be successfully grown wherever our own melons would grow, and having been assured of its royal reception by the American public, Mr. Knowles was anxious to repay the gift. He had noticed that corn in Roumania was one of the chief articles of agriculture, but that sweet corn was unknown. Accordingly he obtained a quantity of seed, hired several plots of ground and instructed the Roumanians in its culture.

The result was so successful and the corn so thoroughly enjoyed that the king called Mr. Knowles to a private audience and thanked him for making it possible for the Roumanian people to gain this delicacy.

This melon has received such a welcome and so great has been the demand for it that two large hotels in New York and Philadelphia have agreed to take all that can be grown in the United States during the nex year, and it is their intention to feature them on their menus.

"Come Into the Garden."

Weeds are sly about confessing their ancestry. In youth they have the charm of freshness and promise denied many fragrant flowers, and it is only when gripped to the earth with roots of iron and ready to set their progeny in delectable grounds that they show their true colors.

[illegible] puzzle how to tell friends [illegible] from weeds. An [illegible] may be gifted with an [illegible] power to detect at once what promises to be candytuft, what grass, what nasturtium, what rue, or plantain, or poppy, or dandelion, and far into the species losing themselves in the disguise of similarity.

By taking the garden seriously there is variety enough to enliven the days. A package of lawn grass seed on a well prepared lawn will in time arouse all the emotions latent in the human character. According to well laid plans and promises, it should be clover and lawn grass. An English friend persuaded the introduction of a pinch of daisy seed, and at the hour of the first weeding a tender heart suggested that no lawn was perfect without dandelion gold.

One who would write a book with many pictures on the distinguishing traits of first sprouts should be rewarded with the privilege of making many editions to follow the first sweeping sales. Plants have curious ways of beginning life. Those that start out rosettes become tall and spindling later; those that send forth threads develop woody stems.

Amount of Grain For Cattle.

The difference in practice between the amounts of grain that are fed to cattle that are being fattened is very great.

The following rules will be found of some service to those who are feeding: First, aim to feed coarse foods to the greatest extent possible consistent with good increase, as they are the cheaper foods; second, feed enough concentrates to make the fattening reasonably rapid in order to save in the food of maintenance; third, when the droppings show that the food is not being well digested by the offensive odor that comes from them the grain should be reduced; fourth, when the animal gets off feed the grain should be at once cut down or the trouble is likely to get worse. At such times condimental food may aid in bringing the stomach back into tone.

Care of the Grindstone.

A grindstone, by the way, should never be left exposed to the sun. The weight of the handle will always cause one portion of the stone to remain uppermost, and this from exposure will reach a different degree of hardness from the underside, so that after awhile the stone will be ground out of a circle. If the stone has to stand in the open, a flat box can easily be obtained to serve as a cover.

Molasses Feeds.

The class of feeds that are fast gaining popularity among the dairymen are the so called molasses feeds, which are extremely palatable and are made from screenings from cereals and well cured corn stover soaked in molasses.

Lavender Oil.

As four-fifths of the oil extracted from lavender is concealed in the bloom the harvest takes place just before the flower begins to fade at the end of August. The oil is distilled by means of steam, which is compelled to penetrate the closely packed lavender, afterward being drawn off in pipes that run through cold water. In this manner the steam is reconverted into water, but the process of passing through the lavender has extracted the oil, which floats on the surface of the water as it runs into glass jars down below. These jars have sprouts in the center, thus enabling the water to run out while the oil collects above the level of the exit. In this the first stage the oil is of a brownish blue tint, and it now has to be refined by passing once more through water. Thus all impurities are removed, and the oil runs out white, save for a very pale blue color similar to that observed in paraffin. Three pounds of oil will make thirty gallons of the perfume. The majority of ladies would be surprised if they were informed that a bottle of lavender water contains but about a thimbleful of pure oil, for a larger proportion would not only render the water too strong for use, but would burn holes through the handkerchief wherever the scent touched it. —London Standard.

The Poor Bridegroom.

"Even the English language emphasizes the insignificance of a man at his own wedding," said the prospective bridegroom disconsolately. There isn't an independent word to designate him. He is merely called the groom of the bride, as if he were just about on a level with the bridesmaids and a little below the maid of honor. Best man, of course, means the bridegroom's best man, but the phrase itself tends to exalt this individual at the expense of his superior.

"Then there's no adjective to describe what pertains to the male half of the affair. You can't speak of the 'bridegroomal' trousers or necktie. On the other hand, 'bridal' applies not only to the possessions of the girl, but to what relates to both of them equally, like the trip and the bridal chamber. The very words 'matrimony' and 'matrimonial' are from the feminine side only. 'Patrimony' has nothing to do with the nuptials. It applies only to wealth and signifies that a man's part in the affair is to get out and hustle for the cash."—Philadelphia Ledger.

How Standing Armies Originated.

The earliest European standing army was that of Macedonia, established about 358 B. C. by Philip, father of Alexander the Great. It was the second in the world's history, having been preceded only by that of Sesotris Pharaoh of Egypt, who organized a military caste about 1600 B. C. Of modern standing armies, that formed by the Turkish janizaries was first, being fully organized in 1362. It was a century later that [illegible] standing army of France, the earliest in western Europe, was [illegible]d by Charles VII. in the shape of "compagnies d'ordonnance," numbering 9,000 men. Rivalry thereupon compelled the nations to adopt similar means of defense. In England a standing army proper was first established by Cromwell, but was disbanded under Charles II., with the exception of a few regiments called the guards, or household brigade. This was the nucleus of England's present army.

A Girl's Preparedness.

There is something very pitiful about a girl. She wears calico, but talks knowingly about the latest styles in silks. Her home is furnished plainly, but she knows the latest styles in furniture; she knows how the silverware should be arranged at dinners, the latest stitch for the marking of monograms on the finest table damask, the etiquette to be observed at a dinner, a reception or a ball, although she never attended anything more than a neighborhood party in her life. Her father's monthly income is not as large as the pin money a rich girl would spend in a day, but she knows what the rich girl should wear and buy to be in touch with the times. She is, in short, prepared at any time to marry a rich man and become a society leader.—Atchison Globe.

A Famous Poem.

J. C. Francis, the publisher of London Notes and Queries, has brought out a volume of reminiscences. One of his quotations records the editorial rejection of Campbell's "Hohenlinden" by the Greenock Advertiser. It runs thus:

T. C.—The lines commencing "On Linden when the sun was low" are not up to our standard. Poetry is evidently not T. C.'s forte.

"Yes," answered the other. "Once Hiram gets settled down in front of his fireside you can't get him out of doors even to bring in an armful of wood."

The Queen Bee.

The truth is that throughout all the wonder workings of the beehive the queen is little more than an instrument, a kind of an automaton, merely doing what the workers compel her to do. They are the real queens in the hive, and the mother bee is the real subject. The workers have made her for their own wise purpose, just as they make the comb and the honey to store in it. The egg she is hatched from is in no way different from any worker egg. If you take one from a queen cell and put it in the ordinary cell it will hatch out a common female worker bee, and an egg transferred from worker comb to a queen cell becomes a full grown queen. Thousands and thousands of worker eggs are laid in a hive during the season, and each of those could be made into a queen if the workers chose. But the worker egg is laid in a small cell, and the larva is bred on a bare minimum of food at the least possible cost in time, trouble and space to the hive, while when a new queen is wanted a cell as big as your finger tip is built, and the larva is stuffed like a prize pig through all its five days of embryo life until, with unlimited food and time and room to grow in, it comes out at last a perfect mother bee.—Van Norden's Magazine.

Mending a Broken Heart.

An Atchison young thing had a heart that ached, her honey boy having taken his affections elsewhere, and her father recently shut himself up with her to reason with her. "That honey boy averaged spending 50 cents a week on you," he said. "Here's a dollar a week to take his place. Every time he called he cleaned out the refrigerator. Your mother will see to it that your brothers do this in future. He kept you up late nights. You baby sister is cross, and hereafter you will let the baby do this for you. He took possession of the most comfortable rocker on the porch. When you look at that rocker in future it will not be empty, bringing the pang to your heart that your silly novels tell about. It will be occupied by the man who paid for it, and that's me. Your mother and I stayed by you through colic and teething and are going to get you through this if we have to take turns spanking you. Now take your eyes off the moon and look at the dust around you."—Atchison Globe.

The Demon Rum.

The subject given out for an essay in one of the public schools was "The Evil Effects of Alcohol." Here are extracts from some of the compositions:

"Alcohol has a very marked effect on the doctor's conclusions in cases of sickness."

"Medical men say that fatal diseases are the worst."

"Some people think the abuse of drink is a sin, others think it is all right, and others take it as a medicine."

"At the present day many people are in jail for committing suicide while under the influence of strong drink."

"Doctors say that the increased death rate from the effects of boozing shortens life."

"Alcohol mocks at you, and at last it biteth like a servant and stingeth like a bee."

Animals Are Poor Sailors.

The polar bear is the only wild animal that likes a trip on the water, according to a French scientist who has studied its behavior at sea. He is quite jolly when aboard ship, but all other animals violently resent such a voyage and vociferously give vent to their feelings until seasickness brings silence.

The tiger suffers most of all. He whines pitifully, his eyes water continually, and he rubs his stomach with his terrible paws. Horses are bad sailors and often die on a sea voyage.

Oxen are heroic in their attempts not to give way to seasickness. Elephants do not like the sea, but they are amenable to medical treatment. A good remedy is a buckeful of hot water containing three and a half pints of whisky and seven ounces of quinine.—Fur News.

She Was No Child.

This college professor, like many other men of erudition, was fond of Lewis Carroll. While visiting his sister he asked his niece, a miss of fifteen, to get "Through the Looking Glass" for him from the public library. She evidently did not like the task, and he asked her the reason. With some hesitation she replied: "Oh, I'll get it if you really want it. But I don't like to have the librarian think that I read children's books."—New York Tribune.

No Need For Talk.

"Does the baby talk yet?" asked a friend of the family.

"No," replied the baby's disgusted little brother; "the baby doesn't need to talk."

"Doesn't need to talk?"

"No. All the baby has to do is to yell, and it gets anything there is in the house that's worth having."

Three county commissioners and three county auditors shall be elected in each county where such officers are chosen, in the year one thousand nine hundred and eleven and every fourth year thereafter; and in the election of said officers each qualified elector shall vote for no more than two persons, and the three persons having the highest number of votes shall be elected; any casual vacancy in the office of county commissioner or county auditor shall be filled by the court of common pleas of the county in which such vacancy shall occur, by the appointment of an elector of the proper county who shall have voted for the commissioner or auditor whose place is to be filled.

Schedule for the Amendments.

Section 12. That no inconvenience may arise from the changes in the Constitution of the Commonwealth, and in order to carry the same into complete operation, it is hereby declared that—

In the case of officers elected by the people, all terms of office fixed by act of Assembly at an odd number of years shall each be lengthened one year, but the Legislature may change the length of the term, provided the terms for which such officers are elected shall always be for an even number of years.

The above extension of official terms shall not affect officers elected at the general election of one thousand nine hundred and eight; nor any city, ward, borough, township, or election division officers, whose terms of office, under existing law, end in the year one thousand nine hundred and ten.

In the year one thousand nine hundred and ten the municipal election shall be held on the third Tuesday of February, as heretofore; but all officers chosen at that election to an office the regular term of which is two years, and also all election officers and assessors chosen at that election, shall serve until the first Monday of December in the year one thousand nine hundred and eleven. All officers chosen at that election to offices the term of which is now four years, or is made four years by the operation of these amendments or this schedule, shall serve until the first Monday of December in the year one thousand nine hundred and thirteen. All justices of the peace, magistrates, and aldermen, chosen at that election, shall serve until the first Monday of December in the year one thousand nine hundred and fifteen. After the year nineteen hundred and ten, and until the Legislature shall otherwise provide all terms of city, ward, borough, township, and election division officers shall begin on the first Monday of December in an odd-numbered year.

All city, ward, borough, and township officers holding office at the date of the approval of these amendments, whose terms of office may end in the year one thousand nine hundred and eleven, shall continue to hold their offices until the first Monday of December of that year.

All judges of the courts for the several judicial districts, and also all county officers, holding office at the date of the approval of these amendments, whose terms of office may end in the year one thousand nine hundred and eleven, shall continue to hold their offices until the first Monday of January, one thousand nine hundred and twelve.

The Key of Death.

The "key of death" is apparently a large key which is shown among the weapons at the arsenal at Venice. It was invented by Tibaldo, who, disappointed in love, designed this instrument for the destruction of his rival. The key is so constructed that the handle may be turned around, revealing a small spring, which being pressed a very fine needle is driven with considerable force from the other end. This needle is so very fine that the victim is almost instantaneous.

Strong Paper.

A single United States treasury note measures three and one-eighth inches in width and seven and one-quarter inches in length. It will sustain without breaking lengthwise a weight of forty-one pounds, crosswise a weight of ninety-one pounds. The notes run four to a sheet, a sheet being eight and one-quarter inches wide by thirteen and one-half inches long. One of these sheets lengthwise will suspend 108 pounds and crosswise 177 pounds.

Evasion.

"See here, you, sir!" cried her father "Didn't I tell you never to enter my house again?"

"No, sir, you didn't," replied the persistent suitor. "You said not to 'cross your threshold,' so I climbed in the window."—Exchange.

Then He Wouldn't Have It.

FLETCHER'S DIETARY GOLDEN RULE.

Here is Horace Fletcher's dietary golden rule for all seasons of the year:

Do not eat when you are mad or sad, only when you are glad.

The researches of the scientists have proved that our nerves play a most important part in our digestion. Many emotions actually stop short the flow of gastric juices as effectually as an angry landlord might shut off the gas or water from the flat of the tenant who had angered him. These emotions inhibit, or forbid, the action of certain glands from which should flow the needed digestive fluids.

If you are worried or angry over a business deal or home trouble—over anything, in fact—you had better not eat at all just then, for worry and anger are potent factors in stopping the flow of the gastric juices.

TELEGRAPHERS' SCHOOL.

Pennsylvania Railroad Plans Large Class at Bedford.

Encouraged by the success attained by the students who have graduated from its school of telegraphy at Bedford, Pa., the Pennsylvania Railroad is to endeavor to secure this Fall the largest enrollment the school has enjoyed since it was established in 1907.

Located at the headquarters of the Bedford Division, the telegraph school has the personal supervision of practical railroad men—present officers of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company while J. B. Fisher, Superintendent of Telegraph at Philadelphia, is in charge of its operation, with C. F. Emerick as resident manager.

That the students may have the opportunity to become thoroughly versed in railway business before attempting actual work, the regular wires of the Bedford Division are run through the school room. Standard train order blanks are furnished, that this feature of operating trains may become familiar to the students.

The text books used in the Pennsylvania's School of Telegraphy consist of the Book of Block Signal Rules, the Book of Rules for the Government of the Transportation Department, copies of all standard forms of Pennsylvania Railroad blanks generally used in the keeping of station agents' accounts, and other standard literature used in carrying on the business. In addition to this, students are instructed in the general duties of an agent in administering the affairs of a station.

The time required to complete the course is from six to eigh months, and immediately upon its completion graduates are provided with salaried positions in direct line of promotion. The bulk of the expense of the school is assumed by the railroad company, as the cost of the course to the student, $2.00 monthly, is merely nominal.

Since the Pennsylvania Railroad established its school of telegraphy there have been enrolled a total of 218 students, of which number 117 have graduated.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect it.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a brick dust sediment, or settling, stringy or milky appearance often indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back are also symptoms that tell you the kidneys and bladder are out of order and need attention.

What To Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills almost every wish in correcting rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. Corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest because of its remarkable health restoring properties. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

Postal Savings Bank.

President Taft in his speech at Milwaukee, Wis., made it quite clear that the opposition of the American Bankers' Association to postal savings banks will not influence his executive action. He declared that the postal savings plank in the Republican platform was binding on all calling themselves Republicans.

"If they do not like a plank in a platform," said Mr. Taft, "or if they do not like the platform itself, they cease to be Republicans, or they are Republicans with an exception, and that indicates a free enlightened and discriminating people. But I am here to uphold the doctrine of the postal savings banks because I believe that they will fill in this country a long-felt want.

"In the first place, it is said the postal savings banks is a very paternal institution; that it has a leaning towards socialism, State socialism, and that it proposes to take the banking business out of the hands of private persons and put it into the Government. No, I am not a paternalist and I am not a socialist, and I am not in favor of having the Government do anything that private citizens can do as well, or better but there are conditions.

"We have passed beyond the tide of what they call the 'laissez faire school,' which believed that the Government ought to do nothing but run the police force; and we do recognize the necessity for the interference of the Government because it has great capital and great resources behind it, and because sometimes it can stand the lack of an immediate return on capital to wait out. We are in this business the Government is especially fitted to do what no system of private bankers can do.

"The great usefulness of the postal savings bank is the great encouragement to thrift on the part of those who are just wavering in the balance whether they shall save the money or use it, because they do not know where they can put it safely.

"Canada has the savings bank, postal savings bank, and what is the result along the border up in the northwest? You find Americans going up the border and making deposits in those savings banks. Why? Because they have got the guarantee of the Canadian Government.

"We are looking forward, I hope, with confidence to a readjustment of our whole financial system and banking system. Certainly it needs it, and it has been suggested that the savings bank might well await that. I am bound to say I do not see the necessity for uniting them together. It seems to me that one system can stand by itself, and if we adopt the savings banks they will easily be worked into a general system of banking because those savings banks furnish us five or six hundred millions of dollars, and that is a very tidy pile to have around for the Government to use legitimately in order to carry on any financial operation."

Death of Governor Johnson.

The sad death of Governor John A. Johnson, of Minnesota, appeals to the hearts of all men regardless of party lines. His rapid rise in life from a poor boy to the proud station of chief executive of the great State of Minnesota, compelled the admiration of the public and won for him universal respect.

Governor Johnson was a Democrat. In the last presidential campaign he loomed large in advance of the Denver convention. He was the choice of many Democrats for the nomination for President but failed to win owing to the personal aggressiveness of William Jennings Bryan.

Experienced observers were disposed to believe that Governor Johnson was destined to become the Democratic nominee for President in 1912. They had come to regard Bryan as the only obstacle in his path. Governor Johnson's death has changed all calculations as to the shaping of Democratic lines for the next presidential battle. Bryan once more stands without a known formidable rival. Unless some one, unmeasured in strength at the present time, comes forward in the next year or two there is everything to favor Bryan's chances for again appropriating the nomination and once more leading his party to defeat.

Steady High Prices.

Bradstreet's weekly Report says: The strength of commodity prices, particularly agricultural products, in the midst of heavy crop movement, is perhaps one of the most notable features of the year. All the cereals are firm or higher, wheat, corn and oats all going up more or less this week. In the case of wheat, a record movement from the northwest is noted, and heavy hedge selling by elevators is remarked, but despite this and the absence of interest in export trade, that grain is slightly higher. Flour milling is said to be better situated than for a long time past. Corn and oats reflect disappointment in the obtaining of bumper yields in advances of ½ and 1½ cents at different markets. Cotton is 10 to 15 points higher for futures, with an active, irregular market. Smaller than expected yields of feeding crops and reduced numbers of animals on the farms [illegible] prices for live hogs and pork. Foodstuffs, indeed, are high all around. In some manufactured lines, such as cotton and woolen yarns and some makes of finished cotton goods, there is complaint that high prices of raw materials preclude normal profits on sales.

Baltimore and the South.

Baltimore's faith in the South and Baltimore's part in Southern upbuilding are strikingly illustrated in the fact that the people of this city now have invested in Southern enterprises below Maryland over $200,000,000. When other sections lacked faith in the South by reason of the destruction of the war, and Southern business men looking for capital or for credit could not find it elsewhere, they found it in Baltimore to the utmost extent of its financial strength. With a total assessed value of real and pesonal property of $625,000,000, Baltimore has one third as this staked upon its faith in the material advancement of the South. Its leadership in the dark days after the war in making investments in that section gave confidence to the financial and business people of other cities, and now the South is commanding the world's capital; but this is largely because of the faith made possible to the world by the faith of Baltimore, which staked so large a part of its total wealth upon investments in the South. JAMES J. HILL INVITED TO ADDRESS GRANGERS

Magnate May Speak at Annual Meeting at State College.

ANTICIPATE BIG CROWD

Several Thousand Persons Expected to Attend Sessions in December—To Provide Hotel Accommodations for Them at Bellefonte.

James J. Hill, the well known railroad magnate and financier, has been invited to address the annual meeting of the Pennsylvania State Grange, which will be held at State College in December. "Farmer" William T. Creasy, Master of the State Grange, last week wrote to Mr. Hill urging that he attend and address the farmers of Pennsylvania. Mr. Creasy is quite hopeful that Mr. Hill will accept. Should he do so it will not only give the annual meeting a feature calculated to attract an unusually large crowd but will afford Mr. Hill an opportunity to inspect State College and learn of the magnificent work of that institution.

The grangers predict that this year's meeting will be more interesting in many ways than any held in recent years. Several thousand persons are expected to be in attendance and it is not improbable that many will reserve quarters in Bellefonte for the week, traveling back and forth between State College and this place each morning and afternoon.

"While we have not heard from Mr. Hill we are confident that he will attend our meeting at State College" said Mr. Creasy to a representative of "The Republican" while at the grangers' picnic, at Centre Hall, last week. "We are especially anxious to hear Mr. Hill and have extended him an invitation to deliver an address.

"Several thousand persons will be in attendance at our sessions this year and we anticipate the most successful meeting in the history of the State Grange. We will negotiate with the railroad companies for rates in order that the thousands of persons attending may obtain hotel accommodations at Bellefonte, traveling between that point and State College each day. There will be many prominent speakers, the grange will consider a number of important questions and all in all we look forward to a most successful meeting."

Transportation of the Minstrels.

[illegible] travel in sweet [illegible] cars, and when they appear here Tuesday, October 5, at Garman's opera house, they will appear in rolling palaces that cost a fortune and afford comfort and luxury. The minstrels of today do not fly-by-night to escape the tavern keeper, neither do they tour overland by horse-power, as did Whitemore and Clark for many a year. Down East, as has since been revived by reference in many tales of fiction and allusion in the rural dramas of the stage. And with all the fame of the cross-roads pioneers, they were lucky to take in as much money in a week as Vogel gathers in a day. Indeed this is an age of huge affairs.

Money In Peppers and Beans.

There is money in peppers, especially the large sweet, green pepper, as it can be used in so many ways from salad to pickle. There is always a sale for them, whether one lives on a farm or in a village. Just let it be known that you have peppers for sale and see how fast the orders come in. You will not even have to deliver them. These peppers sell, according to their size, from 5 cents to 10 cents apiece, and from one good plant one can average $1 and sometimes more. The smaller kind used in mixed pickles find a ready sale too. Lima beans are another thing that one can sell and make money on.

Cockades and Buttons.

The cockade originated simply in the knot of ribbons or strings by which the broad flaps of the seventeenth century round hat were "cocked" or drawn up to the brim in fine weather, and thus originated the three cornered hat as well as the cocked hat of later times. There was nothing specially military about the usage, as the ignorant assert. The same strings survive in the loops of the hats of bishops and other ecclesiastical dignitaries in Great Britain, in the strings of the hats worn by French cures and Spanish and Italian padres and in the cords which are still seen on the hats of some livery servants.

It naturally became the custom for military men to "cock" their hats with the livery color of the prince they served, and as the Hanoverian color was the convenient one of black the "black cockade" became associated in the minds of the people with military uniform. In an old Scotch song of Shirramuir, citing "Woodword's Heraldry," we read of "the red coat lads with black cockades," and a knot of white ribbons was naturally chosen as the badge of their opponents. When the old use of the strings was forgotten, the knot, in the form of a rosette of ribbon, survived, just as did the buttons on the backs of our coats, which were intended to fasten back the flaps in riding or marching.—"Justice of the Peace."

Striking a Comet.

If we ask the effect of a comet's striking the earth we will readily see that if the head of the comet were composed of bowlders a collision would have disastrous consequences. A rain of millions of great meteoric stones would, of course, bring catastrophe. If, however, it were merely a rain of small particles or dust we might never become conscious of it, for the particles would never reach us. They would be fused into gas through friction with our atmosphere many miles before reaching the surface. If the gases liberated by friction were in excessive volume we might suffer discomfort or even disaster. It is estimated that hundreds of millions of meteoric particles strike our atmosphere every day. This would be a serious matter if we were not protected by our great sheltering envelope of air. Occasionally a meteoric bowlder is large enough to resist the heat generated by this friction and reaches the surface. This we call a meteorite. The now established connection between comets and meteors is a matter of great interest.—Ralph B. Larkin in North American Review.

"Choir."

Churchgoers who follow the service in their prayer books would certainly miss the "dear old phrase" concerning "quires and places where they sing," and in time the old fashioned "quires" may be made new fashioned again by [illegible] Choir is a [illegible] corruption upon the language. The old English "quer" or "quere" became quite naturally "quyer" or "quire," and so it remained until the end of the seventeenth century, when somebody seems to have introduced "choir" because it looked more like the French "choeur," as if that were a valid reason. There could have been no danger of confusing a church "quire" and a "quire" of paper, which is a different word, the French "cahier," probably from Latin "quaternarium," a collection of four leaves.—London Standard.

Our County at a Glance.

Howard.

On Tuesday of last week an unusually long freight train passed through this place. The train was made up of three ordinary freights, one pushing against the cabin of the one ahead, the entire length of the train being about one and one-half miles.

Last Wednesday evening Rev. George Stanley West, formerly pastor of the Eagleville Baptist church, now an evangelist, opened a series of evangelistic meetings in a large tent erected in Butler's field near Solt's blacksmith shop. The meetings have been largely attended each evening and on Sunday special services were held, a male quartet having been secured from Beech Creek and added much to the interest of the meeting. Rev. West is well known here and is an enthusiastic worker in his Master's cause. He is a very eloquent and forceful speaker and his words carry conviction to the hearts of his hearers, and his labors here should be the outcome of much good. The services will continue all this week and next Sunday he expects to have another good singer to assist in the work.

At the regular meeting of the K. L. C. E. of the Evangelical church last Wednesday evening the following officers were elected to serve for six months: President, John Butler; vice-president, Mrs. F. S. Dunham; secretary, Mabel Loder; treasurer, Mrs. Clara Thomas; organist, Miss Ann Holter.

Repairs to the extent of a new roof were made at the Furnace school house last week.

The pulpit of the Reformed church was filled Saturday evening by Rev. D. H. Leader, of St. Paul's Orphan school, Greenville, Pa. On Sunday he preached at other appointments of the Nittany charge, having appeared before these congregations with a view of becoming the successor of Rev. H. I. Crow, whose resignation takes effect October 1. Rev. Leader has the appearance of a very able minister and his sermon was quite impressive.

Nathan Yudleman, who for some time has been in control of the branch of the Sykes' store in this place, has purchased the stock from the former owner and will now "paddle his own canoe." Mr. Yudleman is a first class salesman, having had much experience in the larger cities and by his obliging manners and courteous treatment built up a large trade here for his employer. Since purchasing the stock of Mr. Sykes he has added many new articles and now stands ready to accommodate all his customers in the line of clothing, furnishings, and shoes. Judging by the manner in which he conducted the branch store we bespeak for him a very successful business career in Howard.

David A. Holter departed Sunday morning for Pitcairn where he has been offered a position and a place in a band. Dave possesses a musical talent that will some day bring him into fame and as a cornetist we feel confident that he will make good wherever he goes. For the past few years he has been leader of the Howard band and his place in the local musical organization will be greatly missed and materially weaken it.

Mrs. Kate M. Long has had a new brick walk laid in front of the L. C. Thompson store to replace the broken and uneven stone pavement that had been there for so long. Others are to be laid.

Since the sad burning accideut that caused the death of Russell Solt, tender and lighter of the gasoline street lamps, several years ago, the lamps have not been in use and were sort of a "drug on the market." Recently one of progressive citizens asked permission of Council to use one of the lamps in front of his residence and the privilege was granted. Now the town is getting fairly well lighted in some places, as the citizens are using the lamps and keeping them lighted at their own expense. Instead of using gasoline they have taken the burner out and placed a handlamp inside, which gives a good strong light and does much to relieve the darkness of the streets at night.

Scotia.

The whistle has blown after being silent for seven months. On Monday morning, about 10 o'clock, Superintendent Harry Valentine was seen stepping into the office like a 16-year-old boy and everybody knew he had something under his hat. In a few minutes he came out and threw his hat into the air. Then it all came out. He told his story in a few words, but those words meant great things for Scotia meant steady work for every man this winter. Men laughed who had not smiled for seven months. Little groups of women were seen standing, laughing and talking and when the whistle blew the children came running from the school building to their homes thinking there was a fire. Assistant Superintendent William Burnside was seen wrapping up his lantern in a "Bellefonte Republican" and start down the railroad. He did not go very far for he was just as happy as the men over the good news.

With work resumed at the mines there are more happy hearts at Scotia than has been the case for a long time. Praise to Him from whom all blessings flow.

A group of our fine young ladies, (of which Unionville has many,) packed their baskets the other day and marched across the bridges to the woods, where they spent a delightful afternoon, with their fancy work and socially, and did justice to the dainty viands which had been carefully prepared. They had a fine time but the young men were not so highly pleased with their part, which was to stand off and look on and think of the good supper which made their mouths water. One said the girls were selfish and was awfully hurt. If you girls don't watch out all these fine young men will march themselves off to other cities to hunt their wives.

Wm. P. Fisher and family are still touring through New Jersey in their automobile and having a delightful trip. The first part of their trip was down through Adams and York counties, in this state. They stopped over night with our old friends and neighbors, the Cleaver family, and found them all doing fine. They have purchased a fine new home and are very pleasantly located.

Rev. Oyler's sermon in the M. E. church on Sunday morning was on the text "None of these things move me," from Paul's writings. He made it a very practical and instructive sermon. Every one seemed delighted with it. If we would all do as well as we hear and know, we would be better creatures than we are, and if some others who never go inside of the church would rouse themselves to a sense of their responsibility to their souls' welfare and class themselves with God's people the churches would prosper the more.

Another party went to Atlantic City on the recent excursion. They included Charlie Holtzworth, Ray Parsons and James Stere. CONVICTED BANKERS TO BE TRANSFERRED

Complained of Conditons in Western Penitentiary

NOW GO TO U. S. PRISON

Men Once Prominent In Financial Circles Objected to Treatment Accorded And Investigation Resulted Now Prefer to Remain.

Warden John Francies of the Western penitentiary has been notified by R. V. La Dow, government superintendent of prisons, that the following federal prisoners will be transferred from Riverside to the United States penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan., the latter part of this week.

William Montgomery, former cashier Allegheny National bank of Pittsburg, sentenced 15 years on November 18, 1908, for embezzlement.

J. B. F. Rinehart, former cashier of the Farmers and Drovers National bank of Waynesburg; sentenced 15 years, January 15, 1909, for embezzleing funds.

John Young, former auditor Farmers Deposit National bank, Pittsburg; sentenced 10 years on June 6 1908, for embezzlement.

Henry Reiber, former paying teller of Farmers Deposit National bank, Pittsburg; sentenced 10 years on June 6, 1908, for embezzlement.

Thomas W. Harvey, former paying teller of the Enterprise National bank of the North Side; sentenced 10 years on June 6, 1908, for embezzlement.

Herbert W. Tiers, former bank clerk, sentenced 5 years on December 23, 1908, for embezzlement.

John Furman; sentenced 5 years on May 6, 1908, for embezzlement.

Joseph A. Haas, sentenced to 5 years on May 5, 1908, for counterfeiting.

Of these eight prisoners only three want to leave Riverside. They are Haas, Furman and Tiers. All the others have been trying to bring influence to bear to keep them here. The banker inmates of the prison, however, are said to have brought this trouble upon themselves. They objected to being treated the same as the other prisoners and complained against Warden Francies. They had no idea, however, that their complaints would lead to their transfer.

The board of prison inspectors gave out a comprehensive statement in answer to the report made of conditions at the [illegible] by Agent C. H. McGlasson [illegible] prisons and prison[illegible] to be "unjust, unfair and untrue."

The report of the federal investigator was accompanied by a communication from Acting Attorney General Wade H. Ellis, who writes that "in view of the unfortunate situation disclosed it has been determined to at once remove all federal prisoners whose transfer to other institutions is practicable."

A dispatch from Harrisburg states that Gov. Edwin S. Stuart also received a report from Acting Attorney General Ellis. Continuing the dispatch says:

"While the governor did not make the report public, he made a few comments which indicate that the cause of dissatisfaction are apparently not due so much to conditions as to disgruntlement of some federal prisoners at curtailment of privileges and the fact that they have been forced to eat at the same table with the general run of prisoners.

"The governor declined to take the view that the prisoners were not humanely treated, saying, 'While I know nothing about the details of the statements made in the report received by me yesterday from the department of justice it is not only the policy, but the duty of the state to accord to all prisoners the most humane treatment and I am satisfied, from my knowledge of the inspectors of the Western penitentiary, that it is their desire to do so.

"It is true that under the law but 35 per cent of the inmates of a penitentiary can be employed in productive industry. That is a cruel law, and it has to be enforced, but the report states that the inspector did not find that any of the United States prisoners are suffering mentally from lack of employment."

The Fashions in Hosiery.

"The woman who has sufficient money to be well and fashionably dressed is most careful to have her hosiery match the color of her gown," says Grace Margaret Gould in Woman's Home Companion for September. "For instance, if she is wearing a broadcloth costume in a raisin tint, her stockings are of just the same shade, with the instep elaborately embroidered in self-color. However, with an evening gown of white lace or chiffon she may wear white silk stockings embroidered in any of the delicate pastel shades, such as blue, cameo-pink or delicate yellow. For the woman of average means the black lisle-thread or black silk stockings are always in good taste to wear with an afternoon or evening gown. Either plain or embroidered in black, they are equally in good style.

"However, the girl who is going to any evening entertainment, where she plans to wear a white gown with perhaps a sash or ribbons of some light shade, such as baby blue or pink, may have her stockings the same color as her sash, rather than black, if she so chooses. Either one is fashionable."

DIVORCES FOR $2,010

Nevada's Easy Laws for the Weary-Wedded Seeking Separation.

Railroad fare, Reno and return, with sleeping-car, meals, etc	$200
Six and one-half-months' residence, House-rent, 7 months, at $40	$280
Servant, 7 months, at $40	$280
Household bills, 5½ months at $100	$650
Attorney's fees and costs	$550
Incidentals	$50
Total	$2,010

If you are tired of your wife, send her out to Reno, Nevada, and after the divorce you will get a bill something like this above.

Cheap?

In 1907, 860 out of every 100,000 married citizens of Nevada paid the price—the highest percentage of divorces of any State in the Union.

MUNSEY'S MAGIZINE for October publishes a remarkable article on "Reno, the Refuge of Restless Hearts."

Speaking of divorce in general, the writer says:

"Practically a million divorces have been granted in the United States within the past twenty years. The exact number for the years from 1887 to 1906, inclusive, is 945,625, as against 12,842,044 marriages. As far as new marriages are concerned, therefore, there has been nearly one divorce for every thirteen wedding ceremonies. And out of this appalling total, 206,225 divorces, or not quite one in four, have been issued on grounds of cruelty. Only one cause has been more productive—desertion; and the total of decrees based upon that charge is 367,502. This ratio has held good in Nevada, and undoubtedly holds there substantially to-day."

After describing many incidents in Reno divorce court history, he asks:

"Is there much of this seeking of divorce in order to marry some one else?

"It is probably the explanation of seven applications out of every ten filed in Reno. As some men, when their wives are away, mark on their desk calendars the number of days they have to wait, and count every day as one day nearer to the reunion, so some of these set down the hundred and eighty-two days required to obtain the right to sue and the fourteen days beyond that required for the trail of the cause. Every day is a day nearer to freedom, and to a new love."

Pointers For Hunters.

No Horned-Tails Yet.

"I'm having more excitement over my offer of $50 for one horned-tailed snake," said Prof. Surface at Harrisburg several days ago, "than a boy who has stepped into a whole nest of the reptiles. I am receiving letters from all parts of the United States. One correspondent says that he cannot find a specimen of a horned-tail, although, he says, he has seen them, but he asks if he can get the fifty if he sends in a five footed frog that he had in his possession.

"From Alabama I have received the tail of a snake the sender claims is a horned-tail. It proves to be a tail of a glass snake. I have received odds and ends from many reptiles and scores of letters from persons who say I know nothing about snakes, as they have frequently seen horned-tailed. So far, however, I have rceived neither a live nor dead horned-tail."

A Happy Compromise.

"What a beautiful little baby he is!" exclaimed the neighbor who had called. "He isn't six months old yet, either," said the proud young mother, "and he weighs over twenty pounds."

"What have you named him?"

"Well," hesitated the mother, "Henry and I differed a little about that. He wanted to give him one name, and I wanted to give him another, but we finally compromised and agreed to call him John Wesley."

"I see. You named him after the great founder of Meth"—

"No, indeed," quickly interrupted the mother. "That name, as I said, is a compromise."

"But how?"

"The 'John' is for John Calvin, and the 'Wesley' is for John Wesley."

"Oh, I see."—Youth's Companion.

The Judge's Little Joke.

The error of a clerk involved in a decidedly confusing situation the German gentleman referred to in a story in the New York Times.

On a jury day in the First district court a stolid looking German presented to the justice a certificate from the commissioner of jurors. After a rapid glance at the document the justice ordered the man to raise his right hand and administered the oath.

"Your name is Herman Kaufman?"

"Yes, your honor."

"This paper," continued the court, "requests me to excuse Herman Kaufman from jury duty on the ground that he is dead. Now, remember that you have sworn to tell the truth and think well before you answer. Are you dead?"

"No-o, your honor," was the bewildered reply; "I don't think I am."

"You claim that you are alive?"

"Y-e-s, your honor."

"That will do. Now take this paper back to the commissioner of jurors."

The man did so. When the commissioner examined the certificate it bore the following indorsement in the justice's handwriting:

"The deceased, appearing before me in open court, insists under oath that he is not dead. Please investigate and if his testimony be false have him indicted for perjury."

A Wedding Hint.

The tall girl smiled in some embarrassment.

"Haven't you any secondhand shoes?" she said to the shoe clerk.

"But, miss"— he remonstrated.

"No, no; you misunderstand," said she. "I don't mean to wear. I just mean old shoes, too worn for use, that customers have left with you. You see, there's a wedding up at our house tomorrow, and we want something to throw at the bride and bridegroom."

"I see," said the clerk.

He rummaged in a black hole and drew forth an armful of dilapidated footwear. The girl selected some threes, two and ones.

"These will do. Thanks ever so much," she said, and so departed.

"Big footed people are always working that on us," said the clerk afterward. "That girl wears eights. She couldn't very well throw such mudscows at the bride, so she chose some little and dainty shoes here—ones and twos. Oh, yes, it's an old trick with the big footed."—Los Angeles Times.

Saracen's Head Tavern.

The Saracen's Head, Snow Hill, now closed, reached back to a respectable antiquity. In "Dick Tarlton's Jests" it is referred to as "the Saracen's Head without Newgate," and Stow calls it "a fair and large inn for receipt of travelers," which "hath to sign the Sarazen's Head." Its pre-eminent interest, however, is naturally Dickensian, and the novelist has given a vivid description of the old [illegible] when Nicholas Nickleby and his uncle interviewed there the master of Dotheboys Hall. There are various accounts of the origin of the sign of the Saracen's Head. One is that it was set up as a compliment to the mother of Thomas a Becket, who was the daughter of a Saracen. In Selden's "Table Talk" we read, "When our countrymen came home from fighting with the Saracens * * * they pictured them with huge, big, terrible faces, as you still see the sign of the Saracen's Head is."—London Chronicle.

From the Kitchen.

Has it ever struck one what a number of terms belonging to cuisine are applied to man under different circumstances? Sometimes he is "basted," he "boils with rage," is "baked" with heat and "burns" with love or jealousy. He is often "cut up," "devoured" with a flame and "done brown." We "dress" his jacket for him. Sometimes he is "eaten up" with care, and occasionally he is "fried." We "cook" his "goose" for him, and often he makes a "goose" of himself. We make a "hash" of him, and sometimes he makes a hash of something else. He gets into "hot water" and sometimes into a "mess," is made into "mince meat" and is often in a "pickle." We are often asked to "toast" him, and he is frequently put into a "stew" or is in a "stew," no one knows why. A "soft" is "half baked," and one severely handled is well "peppered." A cheeky young imp is a "sauce box," and a rich father is made to "fork" out.—Dundee Advertiser.

He Knew His Business.

Kind Hearted Maiden (fishing for a stray penny in her purse)—I suppose you poor blind people feel your misfortunes keenly?

Blind Mendicant—Yes, indeed. The Lord only knows how I miss the pleasure of being able to look into the beautiful faces of the handsome and lovely ladies who are kind enough to donate—

Kind Hearted Maiden (fishing out a shilling)—Here, poor fellow, take this. I'm sure you are deserving.—London Scraps.

Perhaps.

"Now, look here, Algernon," said a parent to his son sternly, "when I was your age I was at the head of my class."

"Ah," responded the lad, "perhaps teachers were easier to fool then than they are now!"

Severe.

"I wish I had a fortune, I'd never paint another picture!" declared an artist to a brother of the brush.

"Well, there are lots of people who would give you one on that condition!"

The Similarity.

Why are some policemen like rainbows? Because they appear after the storm is over.

Very Misleading.

Battersby came across this interesting item in the household department: "If men would answer their wives kindly and courteously when asked for money it is undoubtedly true that the amount requested would not be half as much as it would be if the husband's reply was surly and antagonistic."

Battersby read this item over twice to make sure he grasped its meaning, and just then his wife entered the room.

"George," she said, "I want some money."

Battersby smiled affably.

"Yes, my dear," he pleasantly remarked, "and how much do you want?"

Mrs. Battersby stared at him in amazement.

"I said I wanted some money."

This time she spoke with much distinctness.

"And I asked you how much you wanted," Battersby merrily reminded her.

"Fifty dollars!" she snapped.

Battersby almost fainted. He had imagined she was after $5 and that his genial tone would cut the amount to $2.50.

But he handed over the fifty without further ado—and then tore the misleading item into infinitesimal fragments.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Panthers as Household Pets.

"A British official in an out of the way Persian district invited me to stay at his house for a night," narrates a globe trotter. "I was comfortably settled upon a sofa just before dinner when my rest was suddenly disturbed by a loud bang at the sitting room door, which, flying open, admitted two enormous animals, which I at first took for dogs.

"Both of them made at once for my sofa, and, while the larger one curled comfortably round my feet and composed itself to sleep, the smaller one seated itself on the floor and commenced licking my face and hands, an operation which had I dared I should strongly have resented.

"But those white, gleaming teeth and flashing green eyes filled me with something akin to terror. To my relief, my host entered at this juncture.

"'Making friends with the panthers, I see,' he remarked pleasantly. 'They are nice, companionable beasts.'

"That may have been true at the time. The fact remains, however, that three months afterward one of them devoured a native child."—London Telegraph.

Nature Sometimes Makes Mummies.

Natural mummification, the changing of the human body into a dried condition without artificial treatment, is an extremely rare phenomenon. In a case reported by Hon. S. Wolffsohn of British Honduras, a middle aged [illegible] who disappeared between January and March, 1907, was found more than a year afterward, on May 6, 1908, in a corrugated iron hut as a perfectly preserved mummy. The hut, in a somewhat isolated spot at Sibun, was raised on blocks four or five feet above the ground and had a door and three shutters, one shutter being open, while one had fallen out. The body was clothed in a cotton underskirt, dark jersey and duck trousers, two pieces of rope around the neck proving self strangulation. The desiccation seemed to have been favored by a combination of conditions, the season having been extraordinarily dry and the small iron house excessively hot, though well ventilated, while the body was thin and attenuated as a result of mental disorder.

Turn About.

A young English student late one cold and wintry night found the door of his college locked against him. The young man outside argued with the doorkeeper inside, cajoled and entreated, but to no avail. Eventually he slipped half a sovereign under the door and was admitted. It was a financial deal wisely thought out on strict business lines. Once inside, he informed the janitor (falsely) that, unfortunately, after taking the half sovereign out of his purse he had dropped the purse itself on the doorstep. The attendant went out to secure it, but once on the chilly, wet doorstep the door was slammed. Then the deal was repeated, for the shivering mercenary was not allowed into his warm abode until he had slipped the half sovereign back again.

Thoroughly Prepared.

At a religious service in Scotland the late Lord Kelvin noticed a youngster accompanying his grandparents and sitting wise as a young owl through the sermon.

At the close of the service Lord Kelvin congratulated the grandfather upon the excellence of the young man's behavior.

"Och, aye," returned the veteran, "Duncan's weel threatened afore he gangs in."

American Hen versus A Gold Mine.

(From Leslie's Weekly.)

The American hen has demonstrated her right to cackle. Her total output is greater than the output of any other one class of products in the industrial world. According to the last census, there are 233,568,005 chickens of laying age in the United States. Their aggregate value is $70,000,000, and if divided, the eggs they lay would allow 203 eggs annually to each person in the country. The value of all the fouls, about $85,000,000,000, would entitle every person to one dollar if the proceeds of sale were divided. The weight of the eggs laid yearly tips 970,363 tons, while all the animal products exported-pork, tallow, beef, bacon, ham, tallow, and sausage-weigh only 846,860, tons. Chicago is the greatest egg center in the country. Seven hundred and twenty millions of eggs are stored there yearly. An average of 2,000,000 cases of eggs comes into Chicago every year, each case containing 360 eggs The greater part of these arrives in March, April, and May, when about 20,000 cases are received daily. During the remainder of the year about 5,000 cases a day are received. These eggs come from all States west to the Rocky Mountains and including, Texas. Few States east of Chicago, i. e., Kentucky, Tennessee, and Alabama, send their surplus to its market. Most of the Eastern States supply New York and Boston, The value of the egg production in the United States for a single year is given at $145,000,000. Wool produced is valued at $45,750,000; poultry exceeds it by $91,000,000, and eggs by $91,000,000. The American hen's lay in a year isequal in value to fifty seven per cent. of the entire income realized by the export of all the meat products. If to the eggs is added the value of the poultry, meat products are completely overbalanced. Only once since the government has kept records, in 1900, have the American mines been able to beat the record of the American hen.

Cat Rides on Train Trucks.

For taking long, fast and dangerous rides a beautiful yellow cat, a pet in the Pullman commisary department at Jersey City, will possibly take the prize, the feline having ridden from that place to Altoona on the rear trucks of one of the coaches of Pennsylvania special, the seventeen-hour train between New York and Chicago.

Several days ago while the coaches were standing in the Jersey City station, the cat crawled under one of the coaches and went to sleep, the place being shady and cool. Pussy was still sleeping when the train left that city at 4:14 o'clock in the afternoon and while the train was making its fast run to Altoona the feline was unable to leave its resting place.

As the train stopped at the local passenger station at 10:05 o'clock that night, the cat jumped from the trucks and ran through the train sheds. Station employes attempted to catch the cat, but their efforts were unsuccessful, the feline escaping up Tenth avenue.

PENNSYLVANIA TO BLAZE THE WAY

Citadel of Republicanism to Uphold Protection.

TO ANSWER "SIDESTEPPERS"

Stalwart Citizenship of Keystone State Will at the Polls Indorse the Action of Penrose and His Colleagues in Congress in Defeating La Follette and His Free Trade Allies.

[Special Correspondence.]

Harrisburg, Sept. 21.

Republicans of Pennsylvania have accepted the challenge of the opponents of a protectice tariff and propose to assert themselves at the coming election by rolling up a great majority for the Republican ticket.

In the recent tariff debates in Washington men of the type of La Follette, Dolliver, Cummings and others who voted with the Democrats against the Payne bill, warned Senator Penrose and his stalwart Republican colleagues from the Keystone state that they "would hear from the people at the next election" if they did not desist in their efforts to pass the measure as agreed upon by the protectionists.

That the people of Pennsylvania, who are benefited more than those of any other state, intend to indorse the action of their Republican representatives in congress upon this subject at the November election is manifest upon every hand.

For Great Popular Vote.

It is proposed that there shall be such an emphatic vote of approval of the policy of protection that the whole world shall have reason to know how Pennsylvania stands upon this issue.

On every side there are evidences of a revival of business due to the passage of the tariff bill.

Mills that were closed for years are being reopened, fires are being rekindled in many an idle furnace, many thousands of coke ovens which were long black and silent are now ablaze and roaring joyous notes of prosperity for labor and capital alike. Steel mills and similar plants are working on full time. Labor is generally employed.

The great textile establishments located in various counties of the state are again busy with a splendid outlook for the future, the shipyards along the Delaware are taking on new men daily, not only to help build the great Dreadnoughts, which the federal government has just contracted for, but to also help construct new craft for the merchant marine, which is already feeling the gratifying effects of the revival of trade and industrial activity.

As a practical evidence of appreciation of the work of Senator Penrose in the framing of the tariff bill, and especially his magnificent services in guarding the interest of his constituents of the Keystone state, a series of testimonials will be given him next month.

First, the workingmen of Kensington, the great textile district of the Quaker City, propose to give expression to their admiration for his special efforts in their behalf. During the entire discussion of the tariff schedules Senator Penrose kept in touch with a committee of the wage earners of this section, and they were advised as to every move of those advocating a reduction of duties which would have meant disaster to the manufacturing interest of the country.

A delegation of women employed in the mills of Kensington, it will be recalled, made a pilgrimage to the national capital to combat the campaign of the society women, who were seeking reduced duties in order that they might purchase foreign-made goods.

Tributes to Penrose.

At a meeting called by the Workingmen's Protective Tariff League of Philadelphia for Oct. 7, not only will the men of Kensington attend in great numbers, but thousands of women employed in the textile mills have resolved to turn out to cheer Senator Penrose.

There will be speeches from men from the various mills, and possibly one or more of the women will be given an opportunity to address the gathering and to tell what they know of the work of the senator and his Republican colleagues in the senate and house at Washington.

A call has just been sent out to the manufacturers of Pennsylvania, signed by some of the most representative mill owners in the state, who are arranging a testimonial banquet to Senator Penrose to be given in the Bellevue-Stratford hotel in Philadelphia on Oct. 16 in recognition of his service to his state and the country in championing the cause of protection to American industries.

This promises to be a memorable occasion.

While these gatherings will be in no sense political, they are indicative of the feeling of the people of Pennsylvania upon the issue that has been squarely drawn by the socalled "downward revisionists" of the La Follette school of western free trade theorists.

The importance of a heavy Republican vote throughout Pennsylvania next November is being dwelt upon by business men and others who were harrassed through unsettled conditions during the tariff agitation.

They realize that should the Republican vote in this state in November be small it would at once be commented upon by La Follette and his coterie and pointed to as a verification of their predictions that "the people" would be heard from.

Not only would this be taken as an expression of disapproval of the work of the Republican congressmen from Pennsylvania in support of protective policies, but it would at once give encouragement to the opponents of protection all over the country to reopen the tariff fight and to seek to elect congressmen next year who would vote to change the tariff and thus spread chaos and disaster in every business and industrial center.

The farmers, who are among the main beneficiaries of the new tariff act, whose products have been protected from Canadian and other foreign competition, and who with labor and capital employed everywhere, find a ready and a profitable market for everything they have to sell, are taking a deep interest in the present political situation.

Reports from every county in Pennsylvania are to the effect that the farmers will be found supporting the full Republican ticket in November and that they will see to it that their votes shall be cast on election day, Nov. 2.

MILITARY PRISONERS.

How They Are Guarded at Garrisons. The Bull Ring.

The hardest duty that a soldier is ever called upon to perform in times of peace and the duty which he dreads the most is the guarding of military prisoners. These are divided into two classes:

First.—Garrison prisoners, who have received light sentences for minor breaches of discipline and will be returned to duty in a short time.

Second.—Military convicts, who for attempted desertion or other serious military crimes have been dishonorably discharged by order of a court martial and have received sentences varying from a few months' to several years' confinement at hard labor, according to the gravity of the offense. Into their ranks the vicious element or those who hold their oath of enlistment too lightly eventually find their way.

Every morning at fatigue call the prisoners are drawn up in a long line in front of the guardhouse and surrounded by a chain of sentries. The somber prison garb of the "generals"—military convicts were formerly known as "general prisoners"—is marked with a gigantic capital "P," which renders them conspicuous and therefore makes escape more difficult.

Some are evil looking fellows with long and unsavory records. Doubtless many have "done time" more than once in civil prisons before evading the watchfulness of the recruiting officer and finding their way into the army. Others are rosy cheeked lads who in all probability have yet to see their twenty-first birthday, and in nine cases out of ten the charge against them is desertion. Homesickness or restlessness under military restraint and discipline have led them into the rash act, the heavy penalties of which they may not have fully realized.

In groups of twos and three and guarded by sentries with loaded rifles, these men perform most of the disagreeable work and menial labor about the army post, which is highly varied in character and may consist of anything from sprinkling the flower beds on the officers' lawns to digging ditches for monster sewer pipes. Although they generally perform their enforced tasks cheerfully, occasionally a particularly disagreeable piece of work causes a miniature strike, and a dozen men may "buck"—that is, refuse to work.

It is then that the historic "bull ring" is resorted to. A huge circle is marked out on the ground, and the malefactors are required to walk around its circumference in Indian file for eight hours a day, preserving absolute silence. A ten minute respite is allowed at noon for a bread and water lunch. A day or two of this treatment usually suffice to break the most stubborn will. If not there still remain solitary confinement on the bread and water diet and as a last resort the dungeon.

The prison duty is by all odds the grimmest phase of the soldier's life. He may find himself standing guard over his best friend, with orders to shoot to kill should his man attempt to escape.—Youth's Companion.

An Obliging President.

During a short lived revolution, says Harper's Weekly, there came to be the head of the government in a little Central American republic a man who was above all things courteous and who was, moreover, very anxious to gain the good will of the foreign consuls. One of the latter, having heard that a certain countryman of his had died, addressed a note to the head of the new government, in which he stated that his own government would be grateful for a certificate of death of the individual in question. A few days later the consul received this communication:

Esteemed Senor—I blush to say that I cannot at present comply with your excellency's request for a death certificate of the man named. I sent my soldiers, but he got away, to my shame. I shall use every effort to catch him, however, and hope to send your excellency the desired certificate at an early date.

Needless to say, the consul lost no time in communicating to the obliging president the information that the certificate was undesired, in view of the fact that the individual was able to "get away."

STATE CAMPAIGN WELL UNDER WAY

Republicans Making an Aggressive Canvass.

STRONG TICKET WELL BACKED

Rank and File of the Party Throughout Pennsylvania Appreciate the Importance of the Coming Election and Its Bearing Upon Local and National Conditions.

[Special Correspondence.]

Philadelphia, Sept. 21.

With the reopening of activities this week the campaign for the election of the Republican ticket in Pennsylvania can be said to be well under way.

Having an exceptionally strong ticket in Judge Robert von Moschzisker for justice of the supreme court, Senator A. E. Sisson for auditor general and former Senator Jeremiah A. Stober for state treasurer, and with every department of the state government under Republican control and administered with exceptional fidelity to public interest, and after the splendid record made in the successful fight for a protective tariff by Pennsylvania's Republican representatives in congress, the Republican party managers look with confidence for a great popular victory at the polls in November.

While every issue and every condition should foreshadow a large majority at the election, Colonel Wesley R. Andrews, chairman of the Republican state committee, has sounded a warning against the dangers of overconfidence. He is urging each committeeman to work as though success depended upon the polling of every vote in his election district.

Judge von Moschzisker is taking no part in the campaign, as he holds that a nominee for the supreme bench should not participate in a political canvass, and he is continuing to discharge his duties as a judge in the common pleas court.

His colleagues on the state ticket, however, are out meeting the people face to face and discussing the issues.

State League Convention.

Candidates Sisson and Stober were yesterday in Erie, today they are due in Meadville in the morning and Franklin in the afternoon; tomorrow they are scheduled to visit Mercer in the forenoon and Newcastle later in the day, and on Thursday they are booked to address a mass meeting to be held in Altoona under the auspices of the State League of Republican Clubs, which will hold its convention there on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week.

United States Senators Penrose and Oliver and practically all of the Republican congressmen from Pennsylvania are expected at this convention, which it is predicted will be one of the most important gatherings in the history of the league.

Besides the two United States senators, among the speakers at the mass meeting will be former Secretary of the Treasury Leslie M. Shaw.

If his duties as chairman shall not interfere, Colonel Andrews will also attend the convention.

Various organizations have met recently, among them the War Veterans' club, of Philadelphia, and cordially indorsed the full Republican ticket and resolved to work industriously to get out the vote.

The influence of a large Republican majority at the coming election in Pennsylvania, both upon national and local conditions, will be far-reaching.

Should Pennsylvania falter, it would be heralded from one end of the Union to the other that "Protection Pennsylvania" had repudiated the tariff bill, which would mean a calamitous condition for industrial and trade conditions possible until after the congressional elections next year.

A Pointer on Mosquitoes.

A few drops of oil of eucalyptus poured on the pillow will keep away flies and mosquitoes, and mosquito bites rubbed with peroxide will soon cease to sting.

Suggestion For a Day's Food.

Kate Upson Clark gives the following menu for a hot summer day:

If you want breakfast, dry toast or a crusty roll, with whatever beverage, preferably cocoa, you like, may suffice. Fruit or eggs may be added, and some feel that they cannot get along without a chop or a bit of steak.

For luncheon cold meat, salad with little or no oil and iced tea or lemonade are generally enough.

For dinner a light soup, with fish, lamb, beef or game, green vegetables, salad and fruit, either stewed or raw, should serve.

If coffee is desired it is best without milk.

He Was the Same Man.

A prominent merchant of Sheffield recently accosted a gentleman on the street with:

"Good morning, Mr. Johnson. How is coal today?"

"Well," responded the other, "I am not much acquainted with the coal market, but I can ascertain the price if it will accommodate you."

"I beg pardon," laughed the merchant. "I really thought you were Mr. Johnson, the coal dealer. You certainly resemble him."

A few days later the merchant entered a tram car and, seating himself beside a gentleman, exclaimed heartily:

"Well, Mr. Johnson, I'm glad to recognize you today. I made a laughable mistake one day last week. I mistook another man for you and, addressing him very familiarly, asked how coal was. He looked amused and replied that he did not know much about coal, but would inquire if it would accommodate me. Then I looked at him and saw that he was a perfect stranger. It really was laughable, Mr. Johnson, but he looked so much like you."

"Yes," responded the gentleman, looking more amused, "and I am that same party again."

The merchant recognizes no more coal dealers.—London Tit-Bits.

A Rare Autograph.

"What is the most expensive autograph you ever sold?" inquired the reporter.

"That of Thomas Lynch, Jr.," answered the dealer. The reporter looked perfectly blank. "Never heard of him," he confessed.

"Well, he was a signer of the Declaration of Independence. He signed it as proxy for his father, who was ill at the time. Soon after he went to sea and was never heard of again. Now, autographs of Declaration signers are much sought by collectors. None approach in rarity those of Thomas Lynch, Jr. In fact, so far as I know, there is only one in existence.

"This is affixed to an autograph letter addressed by Lynch to George Washington, which lends it additional value. It was owned at one time by Jared Sparks, president of Harvard college. Subsequently it passed to Thomas Addis Emmet, from whom I bought it for the sum of $4,000. I sold it to Augustin Daly, who was a keen autograph collector, for $4,500. Later Emmet repented of letting the autograph go from his possession and secured it from Daly for $5,250, presenting it afterward to the Lenox library, New York, where it is now."—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Origin of "Boz."

The origin of "Boz" is known to most readers interested in Dickens. A younger brother of the novelist was known in the family circle as Moses, in facetious allusion to one of the characters in the "Vicar of Wakefield," and this being pronounced in fun through the nose became "Boses" and so "Boz," which Dickens adopted as his early pen name. "Boz," he once wrote, "was a very familiar household word to me long before I was an author, and so I came to adopt it.

Before the real name of "Boz" became well known somebody invented and circulated the following smart epigram:

Who the Dickens "Boz" could be
Puzzled many a curious elf
Till time unveiled the mystery
And "Boz" appeared as Dickens' self.

Hood wrote punningly, but ungrammatically:

Aren't that 'ere "Boz" a tiptop feller?
Lots write well, but he writes Weller.

—London Globe.

Thanked His Stars.

When the French revolution broke out a number of scientists lost their lives, but Lalande, the astronomer, only paid the more attention to the skies and its constellations. When he found, after the reign of terror, that he had escaped the fury of the mob he exclaimed gratefully, "I may thank my stars for it." Would any apparent jest possess more genuine truth?

Allison tells how during Napoleon's Egyptian campaign no sooner were the mamelukes observed at a distance than the word was given, "Form square; artillery to the angles; asses and savans to the center." The command afforded no little merriment to the soldiers even at such an exciting moment and made them call the asses demisavans.

Diogenes, lantern in hand, entered the village drug store. "Say, have you anything that will cure a cold?" he asked.

"No, sir, I have not," answered the pill compiler.

"Give me your hand," exclaimed Diogenes, dropping his lantern. "I have at last found an honest man."

Coleridge's Imagination.

From his early youth Coleridge lived in a world of books and dreams, yet his favorite walk seems to have been the Strand, the last place in the world for a poet to lose himself in reverie. As he strolled down the street he imagined himself swimming the Hellespont, the feat of which other poets had written and which the poet Byron was to accomplish later. Once while the mind of Coleridge was thus far from the busy Strand he absently thrust his hands before him in the manner of one swimming. Suddenly one hand came in contact with a gentleman's pocket.

The gentleman, thinking to capture a thief, seized the hand and exclaimed:

"What! So young and so wicked!" He accused the poor, poetic boy of an attempt at pocket picking.

With some fright and a few tears the boy explained, and we can imagine that words did not fail him who was to become the most brilliant talker of his age. The gentleman was delighted with Coleridge's imagination, which could turn the Strand into the Hellespont. The intelligence of the young Leander made the stranger inquire into Coleridge's tastes, and when he found the boy liked books he opened for him a subscription at the circulating library in Cheapside.—Westminster Gazette.

The Facetious Traveler.

"How did you like Pittsburg?"

"It soots me."

"Do you think Boston is a great city?"

"It has bean."

"Did you find Philadelphia the place of sleep they say it is?"

"Not for me. Everybody else snored so loud I couldn't."

"Is Washington a good place to live in?"

"Capital."

"How did you find Chicago?"

"Didn't have to. It was there when I arrived."

"How were the mountains back of Denver?"

"Rocky."

"How did they treat you in New Orleans?"

"All the time."

"Well, I'm glad to see you're back."

"How does it look?"

"How does what look?"

"My back. I've never seen it."

It was then that the assault took place, but the court on hearing the evidence decided that it was justifiable.—Judge.

An Organ Recital.

A dozen or more women had gathered at a home on Walnut street to attend a business meeting of a society to which they belonged. Before they commenced to talk business one of the women had to tell everybody about her recovery from a recent operation for appendicitis. After she got through it reminded another of an operation she had gone through a few years ago for the same thing, and it took some time to tell about it. That reminded a third of an operation she had once gone through, and when she finished telling it another of the visitors started to tell her experience on the operating table.

At this moment a quiet little woman in one corner of the room arose to go.

"I thought," she explained to her hostess, "that this was to have been a business meeting, but it seems to be an organ recital."—Philadelphia Times.

All that is needed is nice weather, and a wireless message from the Weather Man gives promise of the very best to be had at that particular time.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT

W. C. T. U. of Blanchard, Adopts Memorial for Late Mrs. Clark.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union of Blanchard at a meeting several days ago adopted appropriate resolutions on the death of a valued member, Mrs. Laura E. Clark, widow of the late W. D. Clark. At the funeral on Wednesday Rev. R. S. Taylor conducted the services and the casket bearers were Henry C. Williams, Conrad A. Messerley, Jesse S. Hall, Wilson Forcey, John B. Earon and W. I. Harter. Interment was made in the family plot in the Baptist cemetery.

Mrs. Clark was an active member of the W. C. T. U., as is testified to in the following resolutions:

Whereas, With deep sorrow we can hardly realize that our Women's Christian Temperance Union, of Blanchard, has been called upon to mourn the loss of an esteemed member. It is fitting that we record our appreciation of the earnest and fruitful temperance life of Mrs. Laura E. Clark.

Resolved, That we recognize in her death, the loss of a loving Christian worker whose strong faith, consistent life, leaves an example worthy of imitation.

Resolved, That while we bow in submission to the hand of Providence, we rejoice in her triumphal entrance into the "Rest that remaineth."

Resolved, That we extend our deepest sympathy to the surrounding relatives and friends who so miss her in the family circle.

Resolved, That we enter a copy of these resolutions on the minutes of the union, have copies sent to county papers and present a copy to the family.

Committee on resolutions: Mrs. Matilda Bechdel, Mrs. V. C. Ridge, Miss Sara Spangler, Mrs. Rebecca F. Glossner.

Making of the Modern Man.

We often hear of the tailor-made girl, of a costume with cotton batting here and there to fill out the angular outlines but we do not hear very much of the tailor-made man, whose clothes are made to hide the defects of his figure. What is the use of developing muscle? Why need one spend his time trying to develop a manly figure when it can be bought of your tailor? We had thought all along that art of deceit as personal comeliness is concerned was mostly confined to the female sex. With corsets to create a figure, with padding for hips and bust, a woman can quickly simulate the attractive features that are supposed to come with embonpoint. To the observing eye, however, it is impossible to simulate the attractiveness that comes with superior health and strength. Bernard MacFadden in Physical Culture for October.

HAS 37 DELEGATES

Centre Co's. Representation at Sunday School Convention.

Centre county has been allotted 37 delegates to the forty-fifth annual State convention of the Pennsylvania State Sabbath School Association, which will be held at Harrisburg, October 13-15. County Secretary L. W. Nuttall, of Philipsburg, in a letter to "The Republican" expresses the hope that schools of all denominations and as many schools as possible will elect delegates and that Centre county will have a complete representation.

All persons elected as delegates, and any other officers or teachers who may want to attend the convention, should send their names to Mr. Nuttall, who will send credentials and information as to accommodations at Harrisburg.

The speakers advertised for the convention include John Wanamaker, Philadelphia; Rev. Dr. David James Burrell, New York; Bishop James Henry Darlington, Harrisburg; W. C. Pearce, Chicago; Dr. Joseph Clark, of Ohio, and others.

The sessions will be held in the Chestnut street Auditorium, which has a seating capacity of about 4,000. The representatives of women's classes will meet in one of the churches. On Thursday, October 14, there will be a mass meeting preceded by a street parade in which more than 5,000 persons are expected to participate. Gov. Stuart, the State Board of Directors and invited guests will review the parade. Some of the county delegations will go to Harrisburg with bands and banners. Philadelphia, Lebanon and Berks counties will send 500 delegates, each.

Shot Near Loganton.

Locked Shah In House of Commons.

A shah of Persia, who made a state visit to England in 1873, had a curious experience in the distinguished strangers' gallery of the house of commons. He soon got tired of watching the legislators at work, but when he made a move to go he was told he could not leave the gallery. It happened at that moment that a division was called, and in accordance with the practice which then prevailed all the doors of the house were locked until the vote was taken. Mr. Gladstone made an interesting comment on the incident. "It is," he wrote in his journal, "probably, or possibly, the first time for more than 500 years that a foreign sovereign has been under personal restraint of any kind in England."—Westminster Gazette.

The Entire Trouble.

"Don't take it so hard," said the sympathizing friend. "Remember that though your daughter is married you have not lost her."

"I know," sobbed the bride's mother. "That's the trouble. Julia and her husband have already picked out the best room in the house for theirs."—Chicago Record-Herald.

In Perfect Innocence.

The Beauty (turning from a long gaze in the mirror)—I do envy you! The Friend (pleased, but incredulous)—You envy me, my dear! I wonder why. The Beauty—Because you can see the real me. I can never see anything but the mere reflection.—London Punch.

No Bones Broken.

"It seems his uncle fell out of a hotel window."

"Gracious! Any bones broken?"

"Not one."

"No?"

"No. He was merely drowned. It happened in Venice."

Her Reason.

"It is awfully good of you to let me have a dance," a young man remarked gushingly to his partner. "I can't think what made you so kind."

"No?" the girl rejoined. "Why, don't you know that it's a charity ball?"

He gives twice who gives quickly, for he is sure to be asked again.—London Punch.

Good Reason.

"Well, Johnny, do you wish you were a grownup man?"

"You bet I do."

"But why?"

"So people wouldn't ask me such fool questions."—Exchange.

A Broncho's Rampage.

W. H. Macker's broncho concluded things were too quiet in town on Monday and proceeded to enliven matters to the extent of running away and tearing a wheel off a spring wagon owned by Uriah Housel, of Milesburg. Mr. Macker was driving the broncho down High street when the little animal suddenly started on a frolic. To check the broncho Mr. Macker turned it into Spring street, at the Centre County Bank corner, where Mr. Housel's horse happened to be standing hitched to the iron post. The Macker wagon callied with that of Mr. Housel badly, wrecking the latter, and in the midst of the excitement the broncho went head over heels in the street, rolling over several times and making toothpicks of the shafts.

Clement Dale's Speech.

Clement Dale, the lawyer, was one of the "Old Home Week" orators at Philipsburg, and the Philadelphia "North American," in its report of that day's exercises, had this to say:

"Clement Dale, the next speaker, said that while he was riding from Bellefonte to Howard a few days ago, he read in the North American they were having an 'Old Home Week' here and so he just ran over to take it in.

"The chairman of this meeting made a mistake, though, in introducing me as honorable', continued Mr. Dale. 'I ran for Congress once, but remained at home. Now they call me 'honorable.' The other fellow went to Congress, has returned home and now they call him-well, that's different."
